

First-Time HOMEBUYER'S TAX CREDIT

The opportunity of a lifetime is at hand – right now.

Plenty of homes are available at affordable prices.

Interest rates remain historically low.

And to sweeten the pot, there's the tax credit – up to $8,000 for qualified first-time buyers whose income is within IRS-established limits. This is money that never has to be repaid, provided you live in the home for three years.

Tax Credit Basics

- You are considered a first-time buyer if neither you nor your spouse has owned a principal residence in the U.S. within the last three years.
- You must close on your home purchase no later than Nov. 30, 2009.

There May NEVER
Be a Better Time
To Become a Homeowner!

- There is no minimum income for claiming the credit. If you don't owe any taxes, you can receive it in cash.

- You can claim the credit when you file your 2009 tax return – or, if you'd rather not wait, file an amended 2008 return and receive the money upon purchasing your home. There are also programs that will advance the money to help on your down payment.

- If you co-sign a mortgage to help your child buy his or her first home, your eligibility does not affect your child's ability to qualify for the credit.

I can't provide every detail of the program here – and I'm not qualified to give you tax advice – but I can help you make sense of the regulations.

Don't wait. Give me a call and I can help you decide whether now is the time for you to become a homeowner. And if the time is right, I'd be honored to represent you as you seek out your dream home.
